

Talkin' About Talkin'

There's an old way of talkin' that we all know
We should have gotten rid of years ago.
It starts with thinking we know where it's at,
That we've got the truth; we've got the facts.

Well, the second step in this silly game
Is to use some words that really blame,
Like always and forever.
But worst of all is the word never.
We know what you mean—like

You never do this. You never do that.
You're always sharp. You're always flat.
I waited forever for you to come.
Well, you're just always acting dumb.
Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah.

Now, words like that as you can see,
Just don't fit with reality.
If you want to be clever, you'll never say never,
Always, or forever.

But, if exaggerating is all you've got,
It's better than nothing, by a lot.
But if you want to be heard instead of pushing away,
Then watch your words and what you say.
Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah.

So take a moment and search your soul.
If you decide that your real goal
Is getting along instead of getting by,
Then start a sentence with the word I.

You can start with I think. Then say what you think.
Say I feel. Then say what you feel.
Say I want. Then say what you want.
It's a new way of talkin'.

You can start with I think. Then say what you think.
Say I feel. Then say what you feel.
Say I want. Then say what you want.
We're talkin' about talkin'.
Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah.
