

One People

Mother Earth is calling, Mother Earth is calling.

I never want to be afraid, but I can feel what's happening.
People in a hurting place with everybody snapping.

But there's a truth beyond that place— and as for me,
I wish that someday, everyone will see,

We're one people with one world, one sky, one sea.
One people with one world, one big family.

And after all this time apart, and all the deep division.
Don't cha think it's time to start to make a new decision.

Brothers and sisters one and all, let's listen to our mother.
Mother Earth is calling, "Let's take care of each other."

We're one people with one world, one sky, one sea.
One people with one world, one big family.

Now no more blaming games, there's no one to condemn,
No more calling names or thinking us and them, us and them, us and them.

Arm in arm we'll carry out— new plans for the planet. We heard Mother Nature shout: "Stop takin' me for granted."

It's the time to care for all, and everything around us,
Hear Mother Nature's call and let her love surround us.

We're one people with one world, one sky, one sea.
One people with one world, one big family.

One people with one world, one sky, one sea
One people with one world, one big family.

We're one people with one world, one sky, one sea.
One people with one world, one big family.
